

QR Payment

Question	Answer
How can customer initiate a transaction?	Once customer has successfully topped up by converting USDC into THBS, they can use THBS to pay for goods and services at participating merchants that accept THBS payments. Payments can currently be made using the Scan function via QR code only.
What are the limitations when making payments?	Customer can make payments to participating merchants (subject to the merchant's terms and conditions) with the following limits: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Up to 50,000 THB per transaction per day • Up to 100,000 THB per month
Any additional fees when making a payment	No, there are no fees for using THBS to pay for goods or services.
Can customer transfer THBS to another account?	No, during the Sandbox phase, THBS cannot be transferred to other customer.
How can customer check their transaction history?	Customer can easily track the historical transaction within Q Wallet application by navigating to the Recent Activities section. This feature provides a clear overview of each transaction, including the transaction type, the amount of THBS involved, and the status. Customer can also tap on each transactions to view more detailed information.
Can customer request to change their payment limit?	Customer cannot be changed the limitation of payment.
What should a customer do if the merchant is unable to display a QR code for payment?	Customer may also choose to use alternative payment methods for purchasing goods or services instead of Q Wallet.
Where can customers find the list of participating stores?	Customers can check the list of participating merchant via Quarix's website: https://qwallet.quarix.io/

